Conway Public Library saw another busy Halloween, handing out over 40 pounds of candy and hundreds of free books to trick-or-treaters who visited the Library.

Throughout October, Tessa and Drea organized a costume swap for community families.

Jeff Belanger took more than 60 library patrons on a spooky Cemetery Safari in the Periodical Room.

Eileen Brochu and Linda Dennis hosted one last mini book sale in October that raised nearly $700 for the Friends. Eileen and Linda have been diligently organizing our book donations for sale in the Book Nook and at the library's annual book sales for many years.

The security lights downstairs were upgraded from an obsolete incandescent battery powered system to a new LED model.

The Library will be receiving a free radon detector from DHHS that will be available for patrons to borrow and use in their own homes. Annie will be attending a training on how to properly use the detector.

WMUR will be recording Ellen Caputo's December Once Upon and Story Hour program for an episode of New Hampshire Chronicle.

Respectfully submitted,

Jefferson M. Beavers
Library Director
